from the Levant to Latin America

SOUL KITCHEN

A STORY

About Migration

Soul Kitchen is an ode to the Levantine diaspora that spread through Latin America starting in the 19th century.

People fled their troubled homeland leaving everything behind, but one thing: the recipes that turned every new harbor into a home.

From Buenos Aires to Mexico City, Levantine cuisine quickly made its way across the continent, continuously reinventing itself with the local ingredients of every region:

Shawarma inspired Tacos al Pastor
Halawa inspired Marzipan
Sambosic inspired Empanadas
Migration inspired creativity

The exchange wasn't one sided; Yerba Mate found its way from Latin America, to become a standard beverage across Levantine homes.

Soul Kitchen evokes that exchange with every bite and every sip.

A FABLE

About The Bird

There was once a Jackdaw who just didn't fit in with the rest of his flock.

No one could put their beak on it, but that bird sure liked to stand out: he would impersonate all the birds of the jungle in extravagant performances. His favorite thing to do was to collect any of their old feathers and wear them to spice up his act.

With time however, the other Jackdaws got angry. They didn't like that he was always trying to be different. They'd say "Birds of the same feather should flock together". And with that, they kicked the Jackdaw out.

After a long journey, he found a beautiful oasis. Its glittering waters and arching palm trees were so inviting that he began to sing and dance. Before he knew it, all the birds living there came out to applaud and join him.

They all agreed that the Jackdaw was one of their own and could stay as long as he liked, even offering new feathers for his collection! The Jackdaw learned he can belong. Trilling with glee, he declared:

"Birds of different feathers can groove together"
